MYCON General Contractors Stand Down for Safety during Industrywide Fall Protection Week;
More than 1,000 Field Personnel and Home Office Employees Participate

Dallas, TX, May 15, 2017 – More than 1,000 field and home office personnel participated in MYCON General Contractors’ Stand Down for Safety on May 10 as part of OSHA’s National Safety Stand Down to raise awareness of fall protection in the construction industry across the country.

According to John T. “Tommy” Campbell, MYCON’s vice president of operations, “Our goal is to heighten the level of awareness and the importance of safe practices in both the field and our home office. During National Safety Stand Down week, we structured an agenda that included training and facetime with workers to discuss this priority at our jobsites.”

With more than 20 projects currently under construction across the North Texas region, including retail, industrial, hospitality, commercial office and religious, MYCON places safety as a priority in delivering those projects for its clients.

Says Campbell, “Many of our clients want fast-track delivery on their projects. For safety training, we engage our project superintendents, consultants, suppliers and subcontractors, to focus on safety policies and best practices, as well as protective measures and equipment that prevent injuries and accidents on-site.”

In addition to the safety training discussion, participants at MYCON’s Stand Down were treated to breakfast or lunch at each jobsite.
